1. Introduction

- 1.1 Flexible working is a phrase that describes any working pattern adapted to suit the employee's needs. There are many forms of flexible working including homeworking, part time or reduced hours, job shares, flexi-time, compressed or annualised hours, career breaks, staggered start and finish times or self-rostering. If employees are considering requesting a change in work pattern, they should speak to the Headteacher at as early a stage as possible to explore what opportunities are available.
- 1.2 The Children and Families Act 2014 amended the Flexible Working Regulations to allow all employees to request flexible working. The purpose of the legislation is to create a structured method for employees to formally request a change in their working pattern enabling them to better manage their personal circumstances.
- 1.3 The aim of the right is to ensure that requests for flexible working are given serious consideration. There is no legal entitlement to have the request automatically agreed but rather to initiate discussion and consideration.
- 1.4 In June 2014, the Flexible Working Regulations were amended to give all employees the right to request flexible working. At the same time the statutory procedure was removed and all that remained was a requirement that the whole process is completed within three months, including appeals. This guidance document and accompanying forms now provide a model process, rather than a statutory one, which schools and academies can use to help them keep within this timeframe. Where school holidays would have meant before that one part of the process (e.g. setting up an appeal within 14 days) would not have been able to be met, now, as long as the three month completion timeframe is kept to there can be a degree of flexibility around this. Where the three month timeframe is not possible, extension to time limits can be mutually agreed.
- 1.5 In 2019, The Government published the Teacher recruitment and retention strategy which encourages schools to create a culture where flexible working is promoted in order to both attract people into teaching but also retain current staff. This should be reflected across both teaching and support staff. Read the Teacher recruitment and retention strategy on gov.uk.

- 1.6 Headteachers may feel that flexible working is hard to apply in a school environment. There are many misconceptions about flexible working, these can include:
  - flexible working is too expensive
  - flexible working is impossible to timetable
  - job-share or part time working does not work in schools
  - part time teachers are less committed to their pupils than full time teachers
  - pupils (especially primary) will struggle to cope if they are taught by different teachers throughout the week.
- 1.7 Some of these are quite obviously untrue (e.g. part time teachers are less committed to their pupils) and others can be overcome by good management, clear communication, making clear expectations from the outset and empowering staff to make it work.
- 1.8 Flexible working is becoming more and more requested and the Government want to increase the opportunities for flexible working in schools (Teacher Recruitment and Retention Strategy (above) and Flexible working guidance for schools includes case studies where schools have implemented flexible working successfully). Read the Flexible working in schools guidance on gov.uk. Enabling employees to work flexibly can benefit the school too. Offering flexible working can help:
  - attract and retain teachers and support staff, which provides a sound basis for financial and resource planning
  - increase motivation and reduce absenteeism
  - increase commitment and improve employee relations
  - increase diversity and equality
  - reduce the risk of discrimination and grievances
  - in small schools by providing a greater number of teaching staff (job sharing, part time teachers) can increase the ability to cover the curriculum
  - pupils benefit from more than one experienced teacher through job sharing arrangements
  - retain skilled and experienced members of staff approaching retirement who may wish to reduce their working hours rather than stop working completely.
- 1.9 Throughout this document, reference is made to "Headteacher" but this should be changed where the individual school/academy leader holds the post of "Principal" (or other appropriate title). Where Headteacher is mentioned in this document this also means 'Chairs of Governors' where the applicant is the Headteacher.

2. Eligibility

- 2.1 All employees have the right to make a request for flexibility in their working pattern. Previously the regulations limited requests to eligible parents and eligible carers.
- 2.2 To be eligible to make a request, the employee must:
  - be an employee (not an agency worker)
  - have 26 weeks continuous service with their employer at the date the application is made
  - have not made another application to work flexibly under the right in the past 12 months.

3. Applying for flexible working

- 3.1 Requests for flexible working can be made using Flexible working application form attached to this document.
- 3.2 This is the main opportunity for the employee to set out their desired working pattern and the reasons why they believe it can be implemented. It is a formal application made under the legal right to request flexible working. In all cases, the employee should provide as much detail as possible about the proposed change and why they think it is compatible with the needs of the school. An explanation should be provided of the anticipated effect on the school and colleagues and how all these factors may be dealt with.
- 3.3 There is scope to apply for a wide variety of changes to the standard working pattern and the following list of possible examples of flexible working arrangements is not exhaustive:
  - Part time working either by working less than full time hours and/or working fewer days.
  - Job sharing two or more people do one job and split the hours. This can be successful where individual teachers propose and organise their own job-sharing arrangements.
  - Compressed hours working full time hours over less than 5 days. NB. Consideration would need to be given to an increased workload and that this is being managed appropriately over fewer days.
  - Staggered hours Different start, finish and break times to other workers. Where this can be timetabled successfully (using usual classroom cover options), this can help those who have caring/childcare responsibilities who may need to drop off or collect children.
  - Working from home If a school feels it can support a member of staff (including the Headteacher) to work from home (e.g. to undertake PPE, write up reports) then the decision is for the Headteacher (or Chair of Governors where it is the Headteacher making the request) to make following the receipt of the request and give it due consideration.
  - Part year working where the employee works only for part of the year but their salary is calculated on a pro-rata basis and paid over the whole year.
- 3.3 The onus is on the employee to provide a written application to the school well in advance of when they would like the change to take effect.
- 3.4 The completed application form should be passed to the Headteacher.

4. Receipt of a request for flexible working

- 4.1 Once the completed application form is received by the Headteacher, the process cannot take longer than 3 months (with the exception of extension to the timescale mutually agreed by all parties involved), including the time for an appeal where applicable. A request to extend the timescale may be made because extra time is needed to assess the viability of the flexible working pattern requested. The Headteacher can do this via email, but Section 2 of the Flexible working application form should be signed by both parties to show agreement to an extension.
- 4.2 The school has a duty to consider the application seriously. A consistent approach to requests is important to remove risk of claims of discrimination and unfair treatment.
- 4.3 The Headteacher should acknowledge receipt of the request in writing (email is acceptable) as soon as is possible. The Headteacher will arrange to meet with the employee to either agree with the request or to arrange a meeting with the employee to discuss the request.
- 4.4 Applications from Headteachers should not be considered by the Chair of Governors alone. It would be appropriate for a group of governors, perhaps the Personnel Committee working with the Chair of Governors, to consider a request for flexible working from a Headteacher.

5. Meeting to discuss the request

- 5.1 A meeting is an effective way to provide opportunity to discuss the proposed change to the working pattern in more detail. If the Headteacher anticipates that the proposed change will cause difficulties, alternative suggestions should be considered. It is good practice to allow the employee to be accompanied by a companion (i.e. a work colleague or trade union representative) if they request this. The employee should contact their companion to ensure they are free for the meeting. If the companion is unable to attend the initial meeting, the employee can request the meeting to be rescheduled.
- 5.2 An employee who does not attend a meeting without giving prior notification should contact their Headteacher as soon as possible to explain their absence and to rearrange the meeting. If an employee fails to attend the meeting more than once without a reasonable explanation, the law allows the school to treat the application as having been withdrawn. The Headteacher can write to the employee to confirm this.

6. Following the meeting to discuss the request

- 6.1 It is suggested that within 14 days of the meeting the employee should receive written notification from the Headteacher stating either:
  - that the new work pattern is accepted and a date on which the new working pattern will start or:
  - that the new work pattern has been rejected on clear business grounds (see point 6.3 below) with an explanation as to why the application cannot be accepted and the reasons why. The Headteacher may still wish to explore alternatives to find a working pattern suitable to both parties. Or;
  - that further action is needed before notifying the employee of the final decision.

In all cases, Section 2 of the Flexible working application form should be used to indicate the decision.

- 6.2 Any request that is made will be a permanent change to the employee's contractual terms and conditions (unless specifically agreed otherwise). There is no right to revert back to the previous working pattern.
- 6.3 If there is no clear way of achieving the requested change, Headteachers can refuse requests, supported by a business reason. The business reason must align with one or more of eight prescribed areas (see below). If the application to work flexibly is being declined, before completing the rejection form, the Headteacher must ensure that full consideration has been given to the application. The business grounds for declining the new working pattern and the reasons why the grounds apply in the circumstances must be stated. The Headteacher will need to have an argument which justifies the selected grounds for declining the request. The reason for declining the request must be from the following list:
  - burden of additional costs
  - detrimental effect on the ability to meet customer demand
  - inability to reorganise work among existing staff
  - inability to recruit additional staff
  - detrimental impact on quality
  - detrimental impact on performance
  - insufficiency of work during the periods the employee proposes to work
  - planned structural changes.
- 6.4 Headteachers should always be aware of refusing requests and the potential for discrimination claims e.g. an employee who wishes to work flexibly to accommodate their religious beliefs or childcare arrangements. They may have a case for indirect discrimination on the grounds of religion or belief or sex if their requests were unreasonably refused.
- 6.5 If Headteachers are intending to refuse a request, it is recommended that advice is sought from their HR provider prior to final decision to ensure that the reason for refusal is sound and does not leave the school open to challenge.

7. Right of appeal

- 7.1 If the applicant's request for flexible working is being declined, it is good practice to allow them to appeal against the decision. However, this is no longer a statutory right. Section 3 of the Flexible working application form should be used to lodge an appeal.
- 7.2 If an appeal is requested the Headteacher should set up an appeal meeting, and it is suggested that this meeting is set up within 14 days of receiving the appeal. It is also good practice to allow employees to be accompanied by a companion (i.e. a work colleague or trade union representative) if they request this.
- 7.3 Where the Headteacher is the applicant, appeals should be heard by a panel of governors not previously involved in the consideration of the application.
- 7.4 The outcome of any appeal can be communicated using Section 3 of the Flexible working application form and it is suggested that this is within 14 days of the appeal meeting.

8. Extension of time limits

- 8.1 Section 2 of the Flexible working application form can be used when confirming agreement from both parties to extend the time limit for part of the procedure. There may be exceptional circumstances when it is not possible to complete the procedure within the specified time limit. It might be appropriate to extend the time limits in the following circumstances:
  - the Headteacher requires extra time to speak to another employee, who is on leave, about whether they could work the hours left uncovered by the employee's requested working pattern
  - the employee is going on leave and as such will not be able to attend a meeting within the time limit.

Such extensions of time can only take place if they are agreed by both parties. The Headteacher should confirm agreement to the extension in writing (email is acceptable).

9. Withdrawal of application

9.1 If at any time an employee wishes to withdraw their application, they should notify the Headteacher.

Note to the employee:

You can use this form to make a formal application under the legal right to request flexible working. Before completing this form, please read Flexible working guidance G204 to check that you are eligible.

You should note that if accepted, the change in your working pattern will be a permanent change to your terms and conditions of employment (unless specifically agreed otherwise) and you have no right in law to revert back to your previous working pattern.

Under the regulations, it may take up to 3 months for the whole process to be completed, including an appeal. Any extension to the timescales need to be agreed with both yourself and your Headteacher (see Section 2 below). It will then take time to implement the arrangement, if one is agreed, so you should ensure that you submit your application to your Headteacher well in advance of the date you wish the request to take effect.

It will help your Headteacher to consider your request if you provide as much information as you can about your desired working pattern (Section 1). It is important that you complete all the questions, as otherwise your application may not be valid. When completing your application, think about the effect your change in working pattern will have both on the work that you do and on your colleagues.

Once you have completed the form, you should immediately forward it to your Headteacher. You may wish to keep a copy for your own records. Your Headteacher will then respond to you as soon as is possible or arrange a meeting with you to discuss your request.

Note to the Headteacher:

This is a formal application to apply for flexible working and there is a duty on employers to consider applications seriously. You should confirm receipt of this application in writing to the employee (email is acceptable). You should respond to this application as soon as is possible to either agree to the request or arrange a meeting with your employee to discuss their request. A copy of the fully completed form should be retained on the employee's personal file at the school/academy. If you would like advice on how to process this application, please contact your HR provider. EducationHR customers should telephone 01603 307760 or email EHRenquiries@norfolk.gov.uk
